Three hundred of Allegheny's best citizens met in Carnegie Hall last night to discuss the bond issue. Leading men of the Northside expressed their sentiments, and all but one was in favor of improving the the city. He attacked the Councilmanic forces of Allegheny in a roughcity. Dr. Pitcairn was the man shod manner. This was not pleasant to D. B. Oliver, for he had a son in Councils. Mr. Oliver took the matter up and insisted that the city's affairs were honestly man-much better light would be secured. A Disgrace to the City.

Speaking of sewers, he said the Butche run sewer was a disgrace to the city, and beides it was dangerous and likely to cave in like it did during the flood of 1884. He said the principal arguments against the issuing of the bonds is that the money would not be properly expended, and in answer to this he said that entire new set of Councilmen, both Select and Common, are to be elected next February, and it is with in the power of the people to elect men whom they can trust. In regard to the letting of contracts the lowest and best bidder always gets them, and if there is any favoritism or dishonesty manifested any citizen has the right to appeal to the courts for redress. A committee of five could be appointed to act of the money is in accord with the proper requirements. Mr. Kennedy said in con-clusion that when he left the Mayor's office next spring to become a private citizen again he intended to see that the taxes he again he intended to see that the taxes he paid were properly expended, as any citizen has a right to do, and he expressed the hope that the citizens of Allegheny would vote for the issuance of the bonds.

Lewis McMullen then addressed the meeting. He lamented the fact that Allegheny is gradually falling behind all other cities of her size and advantages, and attributed it to the bad condition of her streets and water, and the petty jealousies and strifes which exist among her citizens.

Must Be Up and Doing. "If we wish to make our city progressive and up with the times," he said, "we've got to be up and doing. I for one am in favor of the issuing of the bonds. We want better water, better streets and better lights, and the only way we can get them is to issue the bonds and let our posterity help pay them. They will derive more benefit from the improvements than we will, and it is but fair that they bear most of the burden of the taxation. This is purely a matter of business and not for is purely a matter of business and not for and then vote for the Councilmen who will see that the money received on them is properly expended. It is said that 100,000 citizens of this city are satisfied with the condition of our water, streets and lights.

condition of our water, streets and lights. I do not believe it. There are 1,500 yearnt houses in Allegheny, and no right thinking citizen can be satisfied who knows this."

Dr. R. V. Pitcairn, who opposes the bond issue, was the next speaker. He denounced the members of Allegheny Councils as spoilsmen, and said that the moment one was elected he began to puff up with importance and plan how to get rich at the city's expense. bayid B. Oliver at this point rose in the

THEIR LAST PARADE.

General Apathy Buried With Suitable Military Honors Last Night.

BOTH SIDES TURN OUT.

Down Town Streets Packed With Enthusiastic Spectators.

RED FIRE AND TIN HORNS GALORE.

Thousands of Republican Paraders Make a Grand Display.

DEMOCRATS MARCH IN THE EAST END

For the first time this fall it was really cold last night but politically speaking it was red hot. If one could have hovered over Pittsburg in a balloon between 7 o'clock and midnight the aeronaut would have concluded that the city was one gigantic tin horn, with red fire and the rataplan of countless drums for trimmings. The campaign of education slunk out of sight, and the pent-up enthusiasm of the partisans broke out. General apathy was not in it. The rank and file were out for a rip-roaring time, and paraders and specta-tors alike shouted themselves hourse. In the downtown district the crowds were immense. Fifth avenue was practically impassable from 7 o'clock till the Republican parade had passed over three hours later. Politics swept everything else out of sight. The theaters could not draw the people away from the closing tableaux of a singular campaign; there were more empty seats than people in all of them. The great stores which usually cannot accommodate the swarms of shoppers were practically deserted and, as one of the leading Fifth avenue

Greeting the Head of the Parade. storekeepers remarked, "You couldn't get the people away from the curb if you gave your goods away."

Plenty of Bands and Banners. The clubs marching to and fro before the parades began, with bands in full blast and banners flying, kept the crowds amused. Good nature characterized them all, though sobriety was not always coincident. Campaign eries were heard loudly for the first time this year. A favorite cry with the Republicans was, "Won, won, we have won; four years more for Harrison!" and from the Democrats the shout came:

"Grover! Grover! He's in clover." Downtown the yells for Harrison swamped all else, but out in the East End where the rats massed in force for a final rally the Clevelandites did most of the shouting The Democratic clubs for the most par went out to East Liberty by rail, but a good sized remnant seized upon the cars of the Citizens' line and made a rapid but sonorous progress in them out Penn avenue. burning red fire as they went and shouting all the way.

The Republican parade was the biggest,

the most brilliant and the most enthusiasti of the campaign. There were more men in line, more bands, more banners, more horns, more shouting, more distinguished leaders Major E. A. Montooth had cause to b proud of the army he commanded, and a gallant sight indeed were the marshal and his staff as they rode at the head of the pro-cession. There were many cheers for the gallant Major by name, and his chief-of-staff, the omnipresent Dr. Alexander Æ. McCandless, came in for an ovation too. The cars were stopped on Fifth avenue while the parade was passing, and a large force of police, with here and there at points where the worst pressure was ex-pected a wire fence, kept the crowds back. Eager Crowds at Crossings.

Eager Crowds at Crossings.

There were the usual contests between spectators and police for possession of the roadway at the Smitheld street and Market street crossings, but the advance guard of police, mounted on big white horses, acted as a clearing wedge to shove back the mob. No serious accidents marred the parade. It was a gigantic success.

Similarly in the East Ead, though of course without such enormous crowds, the Democrats put in their last licks with a will. In point of enthusiasm and organization their last parade was their best also, and the streets of the East End pulsated and the streets of the East End pulsated and the streets of the East End puisated with flaming torches and infectious music for a good three hours. From the Point to Past Liberty, in fact the pent-up political energy of the town, with a lot of loose enthusiasm from the outside, was let loose. If the shouts and marching, the patient waiting and the persistent horn-blowing, the talk upon politics exclusively, the betting and guessing are indices of anything they mean that politics exclusively, the betting and guessing, are indices of anything they mean that the voters are going to the polls in greater numbers this year than ever in spite of their previous silence. As a foreshadowing of the interest taken in the election by 250,000 people hereabouts last night's uproar is indeed significant. It means that the streets of Pittsburg in the lower part of the city on Tuesday evening next will hardly hold the mighty congregation of citizens eager to learn how the day has gone.

Crowds in the Depot. Early last evening and about midnight there was a great jam of people at the Union depot. Excursions were run from most of the towns within a radius - - - city. The crowds were very large, and as a measure of precaution Special Agent Hampton Houghton put on eight extra police officers around the station. They were needed to keep the people moving. No accidents occurred. Some of the boys got drunk, but they were good-natured and there was little disorder.

WESTMORELAND COUNTY POLITICS. ocratic Leader Arrested for Robbery

J. C. McClure, a Westmoreland county farmer, was arrested, yesterday morning on complaint of an alleged traveling salesman with whom he had slept at the St. James Hotel, who accused McClure of robbing him of $40. McClure met the man at the Union station Friday night. They got into a conversation and spent the night together, winding it up by sleeping at the St. James. In the morning the stranger claimed he had been robbed. When searched at Central station McClure had $48 in his pocket, but declared it was his own money and denied the theft. The name of the alleged salesman could not be learned.

McClure is a Democrat and has been taking an active part in Westmoreland county politics. He claims his arrest is the result of his opposition to P. F. McCann, a candidate against Mayor Thomas in Westmoreland county. His accuser said be would enter an information for larceny at the bearing this morning.

The relations of the Amal-gamated Association and Federation have been of the friendliest during the present struggle and they have been acting con-jointly to bring the Homestead fight to a President Gompers when asked last night President Gompers when asked last night as to the object of his visit and the probable result of the conference between the officers of the two organizations, said: "I am simply here to look over the ground and see if there is any change in the lock-out at Homestead. There is no significance the power to advise and recommend what i considered as the best course to be pursued. I was warmly received at Homestead, and there expressed my views on the situation, so that it is needless to repeat them here. I found little apparent change from my former visit, and must say the men are making a remarkable fight. Each one seems to be actuated with sufficient determination

No Change of Programme Adopted. "No. I do not think there will be any change of plan adopted as a result of the conference to-day. The men deny that there has been any desertions, and I had to take their word, as I was not on the ground long enough to find out, but from appear-ances there is no indications of any return-ing to work. Should the men working in any of the departments return it would be a serious blow to the others who are bravely holding out. The mechanics are said to be considering the advisability of going back to work, but I do not think they will.
"As to the effect of the finishers forming a new union, I am inclined to think the movement will fall through. As it is, they are pursuing a very peculiar course to say are pursuing a very peculiar course to say the least, in trying to secede at this time. They have never notified the old order that they were going to leave it. Then again, why didn't they wait until the end of the time when the present scale would expire, and go about the formation of a union in a mauly way? But I have too much confidence in the levelity of the ways to the Amelicanated to loyalty of the men to the Amalgamated to believe that they will leave it now. Should they do so, however, and the finishers form a separate union that would be successful, it would be a blow to organized labor, as both would surely lose by the move. Men work against their own interests to separate at the present time and my wish would be that they stay together.

Doesn't Like the Treason Charges. "I find, however, that the men are keenly feeling the way they are being treated in the cases against them. They do not find fault with the law, but in the way it is being administered. I consider the cases of treason a travesty on justice, and if it were not for their serious nature would be inclined to treat them lightly. But it seems the most will be made of the cases, and are giving the Homestead men some trouble. I find this to be evident and as the time draws near I believe it will be more so."

Mr. Gompers refused to discuss polities, saying that the Federation was a non-partisan political body and that he did not want to say anything on the subject.

In the conference the declaring of a boycott on the product of the Carnegie mills was discussed, but no action was taken.

The opinion of some of the members present was expressed afterward, and they believed that no boycott would be declared. Though no decisive action was apparently agreed upon, the conference is considered as sig-nificant. What move will be made next is nificant. What move will be made next is not known, but it is probable that some-thing will be done in a short time that will bring this long drawn struggle to a close.

OLD POSITIONS ASKED FOR. Twenty-Seven of the Locked-Out Men at Homestead Ask for Work. The indications for a serious break in the ranks of the Homestead men on Monday are very noticable. Yesterday afternoon 27 of the old men called at the company offices, and expressed desire to return to work if given their old positions. Among those men were several who have been prominent in the conduct of the strike, and to-night they were arguing the matter on street corners, urg-ing others to do likewise. They made no that it was uselese to remain out further.

They said if any reasonable encouragement could be given them between now and Monday that the men could win, they would continue out, but otherwise they would certainly go back to work, for they were Homesteaders and desired to remain in the town; their property was there and their only means of livelihood while they remained they was at the steal wash.

By what right does any company rule that its employes must surrender their right to organize as a condition of employment? organize as a condition of employment?
It is certainly by your laboralone that they are able to stand in the position of employers. The wage earner produces all the wealth and he has grown tired providing all and receiving nothing.

'Men want to improve their conditions, and whenever capital tries to oppress them concerning the lams case, he said the punishment was unjust and the verdict forced by a judge who met Carnegie lawyers every day. "Could you expect anything from a judge who insulted a jury because it did not bring in the verdict he wanted sooner?" continued Mr. Gompers. "Can you expect justice for members of your Advisory Committee from such a judge?"

Many crimes have been committed in the name of justice. He denounced the new finishers' organization as the highest treason. Secretary Chris Evans followed in a similar strain. Treasurer John B. Lennon said that the Homestead strike had done more for laboring men than anything since the French Revolution. Ex-President Will-iam Weihe was roundly cheered when he arose to speak. He said he was highly gratified at the end of his official career to find the men of Homestead so united. He deplored the finishers' split and hoped it would soon be cemented. Mr. David Lynch closed the meeting with a characteristic

ISSUE OF ALLEGHENY CITY BONDS.

Mayor Kennedy Will Not Consider Motions

Mayor Kennedy presided at the meeting and made the opening address. He said that as a citizen of Allegheny he favored the issuing of bonds because it would be to the best interests of the city, and he circular sent out a few days ago that a numper of people had the impression the pro posed $2,250,000 wouth of bonds were to be issued all at one time. This he said was erroneous, as they would be issued only as needed and it would be five years before the entire amount would be used. In regard to the lighting of the city by electricity he said he was heartily in favor of doing away with the high lights, and more are lights should be placed on the streets. This would be a great saving of money and their feet shouting: "Order!" "Put him out!" "Go on!"

Mayor Kennedy vigorously rapped for order, and when the audience became quiet Dr. Pitcairn went on. He said that there was not half as much wrong with the water of Allegheny, as those who favored the bond issue would have the people believe, and that the spoilers were ravenously waiting to get a slice of that $2,250,000.
